About our annual conference

Learning Disability Wales's annual conference is not like other conferences. It stands out from the crowd as an example of inclusivity and accessibility. We strive to make sure our event is friendly and welcoming to all, whether you have a learning disability or not.

Many of our speakers and workshop leaders are experts by their own experiences of having a learning disability, we truly believe that everyone benefits from taking this approach.

Each year the conference brings together people with a learning disability and professionals in the health and social care sector, key decision makers in local authorities, support providers, voluntary organisations, and commissioners.

My home matters will look at where people with a learning disability live, the choices they have within their homes, and what people are doing to make Wales a better place for people with a learning disability to live, learn, love and work. You can be part of this unique event.
