

Have you cared for someone with a learning disability at the end of their life as a family member or in a paid support role?

We are a group of universities, funded by Marie Curie, looking to better understand what it is like to support a person who died from anything other than cancer or dementia. These situations can be harder to recognise at end of life, and we want to learn how support works and if it could work better for people.

We'd like to invite you to talk to us in an informal, conversational interview (online or by phone) to talk about your experience:

- What changed in the person's health and when you realised things were serious
- How you were supported and who provided that support
- What helped, what didn't, and what you wish had been different

You can have someone with you for support during the interview, and everything you share will be kept confidential and anonymous.

Your story will help us understand how to improve care for others in the future.

FIND OUT MORE & REGISTER TO TALK TO US

www.readystudy.uk

#READYSTUDYUK

Recognising Approaching Dying in Adults with a Learning Disability